

there is definitely a lower standard of safety for all drivers when this agency lets people who do not have full vision drive. i see no indication that this agency has done its own investigation of the driving records of these applying drivers which would VERIFY that their records are clear. You do need two eyes to drive - you really do and sometimes that is not enough. I ally myself with advocates for highway and auto safety in their stance that opposes continued exemptions. I feel it has a real impact on safety.
